Credit of the city was imperiled yesterday when Atlanta Clearing House banks definitely refused to absorb the $800,000 worth of municipal scrip which will be issued to meet November and December salary accounts for about 4,000 employees.

Thomas K. Glenn, president of the clearing house, supplemented the refusal to absorb the scrip with a communication demanding information as to how the city proposes to reduce its deficit, listed at $3,054,308.03, and warned that the city can not "continue this course of evading its obligations." The banks accepted the scrip last year.

The Glenn letter was regarded in administration circles with apprehension while Major Gen. William B. Hartfield, who takes office December 4, had no statement to make, he reviewed it with interest.

Not an Ultimatum. If themissive is read carefully, officers said, it can be construed as an ultimatum to reduce the deficit by having the banks defer from the time-honored custom of retiring about $750,000 worth of bonds and interest due January 1, even before Hartfield assumes office.

For many years the banks have absorbed the bonds and held them until the first of January, then paid the bills due on May 1. At that time the city ordinarily pays the banks the money advanced the first part of the year.

Iowa Farmer Wins Corn Husking Contest

NEWARK, Ohio, November 10.—(AP)—Carl Carlson, of Audubon, Iowa, won the 13th annual national corn husking championship on the Alva Oyer farm, southwest of here, today.

His brother, Elmer, won the 1935 championship but did not defend his title.

Carlson husked 1,472.75 pounds of corn in 30 minutes, while the next best with 17 other farmers from nine states in a field ankle-deep in mud.

Right behind him was Adam Byczynski, of Illinois, with 1,466.24 pounds.

A crowd estimated by contest officials at 125,000 braved the snappy weather and the sloppy field to watch agriculture's greatest sporting event.

Atlanta, Nation Will Unite To Honor War Dead Today

Survivors Will March Again
Here in Appeal for Peace in Future.

Legions of Atlantans, peace-time celebrants observing the anniversary of the end of the most disastrous and horrible of wars, will gather in parades, speeches and celebrations today, the private citizenry holding the olive branch of peace, while the drumming feet of armed forces march by to insure that peace.

Concurrent with the Armistice Day celebration will be the annual city-wide sale of poppies for the benefit of disabled war veterans, their families and the families of the war dead. Poppy day brings Atlanta the opportunity to show in a concrete and helpful way their appreciation of the men who served as a potential sacrifice in a conflict they believed to be a war to end war.

The big parade, with Major Ben T. Huiet as parade marshal, will begin at 10 o'clock this morning proceeding along Whitehall and Peachtree. Continued in Page 3, Column 2.

NEGRO IS INDICTED IN ROBERTS KILLING

Motorman's Story of Passenger With Sawed-Off Shotgun Is Disclosed.

A negro man was indicted yesterday for the murder nearly a year ago of J. R. Roberts, Atlanta tea salesman, who was shot to death in the yard of his Fourth street residence December 17, 1935. Mayfield Turner, who has been held by city detectives since September, was named.

Officers said Turner's arrest and indictment followed his confession of circumstances which they had gathered in nearly a year of investigation.

Turner was finally wounded as he parked his car in the garage at the rear of his home, police said. He staggered to the back door and was admitted to the house by a member of his family who had heard the sound of the shot. The salesman died in the kitchen without telling what had occurred.

Through detectives would not reveal all their evidence, it was learned a street car motorman identified Turner as a man he saw in his street car early last January. The motorman told the police the negro rode to the end of the Ponce de Leon avenue line and that while he changed the trolley he saw the negro get off and pick up a sawed-off shotgun from a hiding place in the bushes nearby.

By unanimous vote of the board, Margaret Raptis, 12, sixth grade student for Fowlewood school, can not return to Atlanta schools until she and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Raptis, will conform to the civic program of the Atlanta public school system.

Board action followed an appeal for tolerance by the Rev. F. Robert Sutton, minister of the Peachtree Christian church, and a statement by Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, that those who "receive the benefits of the school system should assume the responsibilities."

Others Introduced. More than 40 representatives of patriotic and veterans' organizations attended and were introduced to board members. They attended to lend their moral support to the board's civic program and to back Sutton in his efforts to urge the schools of those who refuse to participate in the program.

Ernest J. Brewer, former board president, was author of the motion to sustain Sutton's action and at the same time delivered an ultimatum to "any others who refuse to salute and show allegiance to the flag to come forward now." He amplified by saying: "If I stand on the board for a million years, I'll vote to fire every one of them."

Dr. Burns prefaced his argument by asserting he is proud to salute the flag, that he is not a member of and is not connected with any jingo, that he is a member of the flag and is teaching his son to do the same.

"I am not a member of this," Dr. Burns said, referring to Jevohav's Witnesses, with which the Raptis family and the George Leoles family is affiliated. Leoles' little daughter was suspended from the Atlanta system a month ago on similar charges. "The action of the board in expell-

Cobb Says: It's Fun
To Cross Wet River

By IRVING S. COBB.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

CHICAGO.—It's fun to cross a river with at least a trace of wetness in it. It must be my early raising, but I like a river to be dampish—in spots, anyhow.

After two years, I can't get used to southern California rivers, where, for nine months a year, the only craft you can make is to swim the bank, and unless they're a sparkling stream you can't see where you're going, and they deepen the channel by blasting and not by dredging, and you come back from an aquatic trip full of hay fever dust. They do say you have to learn to swim all over again every time you find a river.

One of the sunkiest products of the California summer which we do not advertise is the average river bed.

Maybe that's why I'm all thrilled when we pass over a watercourse that actually has water in it.

Margaret Mitchell was an obscure person a year or so ago, as far as the big wide world was concerned. Then, she timidly admitted to a book publisher she had written a little thing called "Gone With the Wind." He glanced at it, liked it and published it. The world read it and loved it. Then it all started:

"Who is she?—what is she?—where is she?—what does she eat for breakfast?—looky here, what she says one of the raiders."

The officers then informed her she was under arrest and went about removing the apparatus. Other arrests are expected, they reported.

Miss Kelly is charged with manu-

MADRID IN FLAMES AS REBELS' BOMBS FIRE FORTY BLOCKS

Defenders, However, Say They Have Driven Invaders Back 2 Miles;
City Is Heavily Shelled.

MADRID, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Flames spread through 40 blocks of the northwest section of Madrid tonight after a Fascist airplane and artillery bombardment of the capital.

Fire from the Fascist battery between the Campamento and El Escorial road caused severe damage to the city's defenses.

The Paseo de Rosales at the western extremity of the city above the Norte station along the Manzanares river became a blazing inferno after heavy shells crushed a barricade at the station and the Montana barracks, on the site of the formal royal stables where the government's powerful batteries were emplaced.

A dense pall of acrid, greenish brown smoke drifted eastward over the city as a whole area, comprising some 40 blocks, became a seething cauldron of flame. Thick smoke rolled from the Norte area.

The glare was visible from many points of the city and some observers believed bombs dropped by Fascist planes set off the blaze.

Crackling flames offered great visibility to the enemy across the Manzanares river.

The devastating artillery shelling followed upon the heaviest aerial bombardment the city had suffered.

One bomb fell in the middle of the turreted and arched "Plaza Mayor," Madrid's ancient city building. An artillery shell sounded through

Farley To Get Donkey Mascot Won by Election Bet

Chairman James A. Farley has accepted as mascot of the democratic party a donkey won by Lieutenant Governor J. Emile Harley, of South Carolina, from Lieutenant-Governor J. B. Snider, of Mississippi, in a bet over whose state would give President Roosevelt the biggest percentage of its vote. The South Carolina percentage was the larger so here's Snider in Jackson, Miss., giving the animal some instructions before starting it on its journey. Story in Page 9. Associated Press photo.

OFFICE TO COLLECT AGE BENEFIT DATA

Security Board To Keep Records on Eligible Wage Earners in City.

The Social Security Board yesterday established a field office in Atlanta preparatory to setting up initial wage records for use in distributing old age benefits under the security act as they begin to accrue beginning January 1.

R. E. Haines, of Columbus, is in charge of the office as acting district manager, and J. W. Overstreet Jr. is the acting assistant district manager.

Mr. Haines explained the field offices are being established in cities where the Postoffice Department has central accounting offices to furnish the Postoffice Department with all aid and co-operation necessary for the assignment of social security account numbers" to the industrial and commercial workers of this area who will be in the benefits of the act.

Elliott Roosevelt Reveals Discord With Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr.

President's Son Had Agreed To Introduce Distant Relative at Lecture But Later Made Excuses When She Protested.

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 10.—(P)—Elliott Roosevelt, strapping son of the President, said today he acceded to a request by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. not to introduce his father, the President, at a town hall audience last night, to avoid an "embarrassing" situation.

Young Roosevelt, invited several weeks ago to appear at the town hall lecture and introduce his distant relative, said he cancelled plans when Mrs. Roosevelt wrote him that divergent political views "would make it embarrassing for you to appear at the lecture."

The letter suggested, Roosevelt said, that he inform the town hall committee that he would be out of the city and could not serve.

Small, vivacious Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the former governor of the Philippines, was in Dallas tonight for a similar lecture on "Life in the Philippines," said:

"I have written no letters to the husband and that it would be embarrassing to all concerned for you to call at the lecture."

The President's son said he telegrammed his relative that under the circumstance he would oblige.

Roosevelt said he then explained to Mrs. Harrison, of the Town Hall committee, that "I wanted you to know the whole story as I would not let you down with a lie, nor would I do anything to make Mrs. Roosevelt angry at your organization."

Mrs. Roosevelt, after her introduction by Kennedy, thanked him for not referring to her "as one of those out-of-season Roosevelts."

Young Roosevelt said he received a letter from the lecturer in which she reminded him that her husband's political views "differed in every respect to those of your father, the President."

The letter continued, he said, that she entertained the same views as her husband and that "it would be embarrassing to all concerned for you to call at the lecture."

TECH CLASS OFFICERS CHOSEN BY ELECTION

Salesman of Rayon Issues Tells Court of High Pres- sure 'Patter.'

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(P)—A former stenographer and a stock salesman described in federal court today what they said were high-pressure telephone sales methods used by the National Investment Transcript, Inc., a New York investment corporation, in stock in 1933 and 1934.

The transcript firm and 15 individuals are charged with conspiracy and mail fraud in connection with the stock sales, which, Assistant United States Attorney Leo Fennelly charged, brought $5,000,000 loss to unwary investors.

Miss Katherine Portner, former stenographer, testified that when she was subpoenaed, she was called to the Philadelphia home of Edward Manchel, one of the defendants, and told, along with other former employees, to appear at a hearing.

An award of a handsome certificate, signed by President Roosevelt, who is also president of the American Red Cross, and other high national officials, will be presented to the state chapter first completing its 100% membership goal to the chapter exceeding its goal by the largest percentage, and to the chapter enrolling the most members in proportion to the population of its territory.

President Roosevelt has expressed the hope that Georgia will lead all the states in the year 1937 in membership in proportion to population, stating that, "It is our membership dollars that make possible the service of this great humanitarian agency."

Henry T. Dieter, one of the telephone salesmen, who pleaded guilty to the charge, said the "canvass" they were instructed to use went like this:

"Hello—this is the old man. I'm giving up a holiday to get in touch with you. I wanted to tell you that Rayon hit a new high and it looks as if it's going higher. The banking group that bought 110,000 shares . . . etc."

Among the defendants are Clement H. Congdon, editor of the Philadelphia Sunday Transcript; John Hennigan, Marshall Ward, and Samuel Halpert. The trial will continue Thursday.

Debutantes To Judge Entries in Tech Wrecks

Taking time out from parties and other forms of social entertainment, 16 Atlanta debutantes will pass judgment on entries in the "Wreck of Georgia Tech," at 8 o'clock Friday night at Grant field.

The annual occasion brings together all types and sizes of the four-wheel family with more than 50 Tech clubs, fraternities and organizations planning entries.

The contest is sponsored by the Yellow Jacket Club annually for the purpose of encouraging school spirit.

Miss Mattie Lou Banks, a board member, presided at Macon, where there were 22 applicants, and Mrs. Francis L. King at Augusta, where there were 18.

Dull Resignation.

There was apparently an attitude of dull resignation, but the Madrid defenders held on and claimed definite gains.

Thousands of militia, marines, police and government legions charged with fixed bayonets, waited to drive back the Fascist enemy.

For 24 hours the Madrid defenders, heartened by a counter-attack which swept the Fascists back from the gates to the capital, held Carabanchel and Casa de Campo.

For the first time the government troops drove Fascist lines machine gunned by five aerial fighters swooping down and across the river.

"We lost no rounds today," one militia officer said. "It looks like Franco bit off more than he can chew."

Government infantry, swept to within 500 yards of the Toledo gate and Angel bridge last night, still held on and beat their attackers on the south a distance of two miles from the bridge. Furious fighting, however, raged today in Casa del Campo, the great preserve west of the city, and the defenders admitted the Fascists were menacing a government military hospital there.

On the northwest, government forces exchanged shellfire from Aravaca across a valley with Insurgent artillerymen in position at the suburb of Pozuelo. The defense council said the northwestern road, from Las Rozas to El Escorial, still was held by Madrid's men.

in trying to take Madrid with less than 10,000 men.

Observers watched through field glasses as the Madrid troops dashed through gunfire to capture line of roads between Carabanchel and the Talavera De La Reina highway.

Watches of the battle said the government for the first time had resorted to shrapnel in firing anti-aircraft guns. Official sources said two of the enemy bombers had been shot down during today's raid.

The ragged workers army clung to the capital's edges—even pushed back the besiegers from the gates and bridges.

Three giant bombers speeding low, protected by 15 swift pursuit planes, roared over the city before dusk, then dived on government forces near the bridge.

Huge clouds of smoke and debris rose skyward as the successive detonations shook Madrid.

Again the planes dived, their machine gunners pouring lead on the shallow government trenches fringing the city.

The trenches west of the city's gates were evacuated repeatedly during today's bombardment, but the militiamen swarmed back into them as soon as the planes sped away.

Prayers for Peace.

While the marching field of soldiers who saw the death and horror of the past great war beat a drumming monotone on the church bells of all England, the churches of Atlanta will make a pilgrimage throughout the day to their churches to engage in silent prayer for an end to war.

In many of the churches, holy communion will be celebrated at the 11 o'clock hour, followed by a thank offering. This ceremony will be observed simultaneously in every Episcopal church in the country and in many foreign lands.

Prediction: The exercises at Grant field, Atlanta Post No. 1 will present an American flag to the Inman Park school. The Waldo M. Slaton Post will present North Fulton High school with a flag at exercises at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, with addresses by Jere Wells, Fulton superintendent of schools, and Dean Raimundo de Orville. Fulton High school will observe the day with a similar group in the school auditorium, followed by flag raising exercises. Virlyn B. Moore, a graduate of Fulton High school, will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by Major Charles T. Senay, professor of military science and tactics of Fulton county high schools. Jerry M. West, superintendent of Fulton county schools, and music teacher at Fulton High school, will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by Major Charles T. Senay, professor of military science and tactics of Fulton county high schools. Jerry M. West, superintendent of Fulton county schools, and music teacher at Fulton High school, will be the principal speaker.

At College Park, students of the Georgia Military Academy, Russell High school and Legionnaires will hold a parade beginning at 9:30 a.m. on the grounds of the city monument. Lieutenant Colonel L. A. Falligant, of Fort McPherson, will deliver the principal address. The Fort McPherson band will play at the morning exercises and again in a band concert at the monument at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

By GEORGE E. HOLT.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

When the crash of the family fortune is over, after his father's death, Shane O'Hara sells his biplane, picks up an old crate he once owned and hops off to Baltimore to find work. He lands at the ranch above La Paloma, which his father gave him three years earlier when he was 21. Near San Felipe the plane takes fire and it is destroyed in a small elm. A small figure in faded blue trousers experimentally whistles "Little Birdie in the Tree." He is thrown from the plane as he gets to earth. He does just that, only to discover the urchin is a girl who, angry at first, laughs at his embarrassment. Aged 12, she is the daughter of a rancher. When he asks Shane to be his guest at Rancho Soledad which by lucky chance adjoins La Paloma, when he meets the girl, he realizes she's the "imp" he spanked. The possessive attitude towards the girl, however, is still evident. Title to La Paloma is claimed by Sam Verdugo, a Mexican, now the manager who warns Shane he can take possession of the ranch. Sam is not the only one who wants the ranch. Shane suspected but Delane and Rose assure him they know he's innocent. He is a witness at the coroner's inquest. Not to go on with the story.

INSTALLMENT XIV.

"I was 24 years of age last February," said Shane. "Residence at present the Rancho Soledad, where I am the guest of Don Timoteo Delane. My home has been in Baltimore until I left it about a week ago to come to this country, where my father had left me a property known as Rancho Paloma. No special occupation. This is my first year since college—and times could be better in the east. But I hold an aviator's license, and expected to do something along that line."

"Thank you, Mr. O'Hara," said the coroner. "Now, did you see the deceased at any time yesterday?"

"I did," said Shane. "Twice. Once in the morning, with Don Timoteo; once last night."

There was a little bustle of interest in the room.

"Please tell us about the first meeting, Mr. O'Hara," said the coroner.

"Don Timoteo," said Shane, "was kind enough to ride over with me yesterday morning to the Rancho Paloma, where he had been seen. On the way over he told me of this Sam Verdugo, the manager of the ranch, and his claim to title to the ranch."

sometime and I should tell them. So I say it now. This ranch is mine."

"What did you reply, Mr. O'Hara?"

"I told him I had a deed to the ranch."

"And then?"

"He said, 'You may have the deed, but I have possession.' Then I told him that he certainly had the right to possess until his claim to the courts, but that until the courts decided in his favor, I believed the law would give me possession."

"Is that all, Mr. O'Hara?"

"No. He then grew more excited. As I remember, he said, 'You will throw me off the ranch. You will take possession?' But I, Sam Verdugo, say you will not. Never. Except,"

Rose saw that Shane had beat off his words. Probably he had a mental picture of that thing under the blanket in the rear chamber. But it was too late.

"Except," repeated the coroner.

"Except over my dead body," was what he said, sir."

"At that there was a little sharp inhalation of breaths through the room.

"And that finished the conversation between you?" asked the coroner.

"Yes," said Shane. "That was when he said, 'Sir.'"

For a moment there was silence, except for the breathing of Shane, and the uneasy shuffle of shoes as one turned to another to raise his brows or shrug. Then the coroner's voice again, dismissing Shane for a time, calling Don Timoteo to come.

Recalling Shane to the chair, the coroner said, "Now, Mr. O'Hara, please tell us about your second meeting with the deceased."

"It was over the moon," said the coroner.

"As for the second meeting, said the coroner, 'It was this way.'

"Calmly, dispassionately, he told of the night ride with Fernando Miller. He may have been conscious of the little current of whispers drifting about, but if so he gave no sign. Nor did the coroner indicate, even by the slightest change of tone, that Shane's words raised any interest in his mind. But when Shane had finished, the coroner seemed to catch Don Timoteo's eye and hold it for a moment. If there was any exchange of thoughts, it was through telepathy, for neither eye wavered, neither face changed its muscles.

"You were left alone, then, Mr. O'Hara. If I understand you rightly, Mr. Miller, in the immediate vicinity of the gateway of the Rancho Paloma, where the deceased then stood, smoking. And were so alone for a considerable space of time, reckoned to be about as some 15 minutes?"

"That is correct, sir," said Shane.

"But you did not, during that interval, approach the deceased, nor have speech with him?"

"Shane replied, 'He said, as nearly as I can remember, 'Yes, I am the manager, but I am the rightful owner of La Paloma. Why shouldn't I say so? Why should I wait? I knew that some one would arrive

SNIDER WILL DELIVER DEMOCRATIC DONKEY

Mississippi To Present
"Queenie" to Chairman
James Farley.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 10.—(P)—Lieutenant Governor J. B. Snider, of Mississippi, was ready tonight to personally escort the Democratic party's new mascot—a 198-pound donkey—to the national capital to present to Democratic Chairman James A. Farley.

The donkey, which answers to the name of "Queenie," is also ready to assume its place in the national spotlight.

"Queenie" was lost to the Democratic party in a bet between Lieutenant Governor J. B. Snider and Lieutenant Governor J. E. Harley, of South Carolina, over which of their states would poll the largest percentage of votes for Roosevelt.

South Carolina won the wager by piling up 98 per cent of its votes for the New Deal, compared with a meager 97,092 per cent from Mississippi—the second most rock-ribbed Democratic state.

Chairman Farley last night proclaimed the Mississippi donkey as the official mascot of the party, and the little burro will make its home in Washington with other New Deal bigwigs for the next four years at least.

Formal presentation of the donkey will occur during the inauguration ceremonies of Governor James A. Snider, a 211-pounder, leading the little burro down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House steps with Lieutenant Governor Harley mounted.

"Queenie" had a political background. Owned by City Commissioner J. M. Buchanan of Vicksburg, the donkey participated in the political campaigns in the Hill City, and had been unofficial mascot of the Democratic party in Mississippi for several years.

ANN HARDING GRANTED CONTINUED CUSTODY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—(P)—Despite vigorous protests of Ann Harding's ex-husband, the blonde screen actress was granted court permission today to keep her daughter with her in England until next June tenth.

In an affidavit opposing Miss Harding's petition for an extension of her custody of her 10-year-old daughter, her husband, declared he had been "duped" into allowing her to take seven-year-old Jane abroad with her last summer.

Bannister set forth Miss Harding's Hollywood home had been leased, that she is not "so harmonious terms" with first husband, and that he had been informed she had legally renounced her California citizenship.

Superior Judge Lewis Howell Smith granted Miss Harding's petition.

3 RUSSIANS ARE KILLED BY PLANE PROPELLER

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—(P)—The government announced today three persons were killed and at least eight injured November 1 when an army airplane propeller whirled loose and fell into Red Square.

The airplane coasted down safely.

Details of the accident were not made public.

After the reception there was a ball, to which several hundred received invitations.

Miss Heiskell is a descendant of two distinguished Tennessee and Mississippi families. Her mother was the former Ruth McCall, daughter of the late Frank J. LONE MEMPHIS GIRL MAKES SOCIETY BOW

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 10.—(P)—Blonde Adaline Heiskell, 18, made her bow to society tonight at the exclusive Memphis County Club—the city's long awaited debutante of 1936.

Adaline, who refused to wait until next year when there would be a larger group of eligibles'—was gowned in traditional white, a gleaming satin and filmy net. She stood in the receiving line at the reception with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lansford Yandell Williamson. Her debut flowers were a corsage of white orchids with centers of deep purple, worn on the shoulder. Her only jewels were a strand of pearls.

QUEEN NOT EXPECTED TO ATTEND CORONATION

Special Boxes Reserved for Those Invited by Royal Family.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Members of the royal family and those personally invited by the king or Queen Mary to attend the coronation service in Westminster Abbey on May 12 will have special groups of seats reserved for them.

These groups will be known as "box," "king's box," "queen's box," "the royal box." They will not be walled in, in any way, but separated from the main seat accommodation.

In the royal box, the little Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose will sit with their mother, the Duchess of York, the princess royal and her husband, Viscount Lascelles, and the Hon. Gerald Lascelles, the Duchess of Gloucester and the Duchess of Kent. Other members of the royal family will be with them.

The largest of the enclosures will be the king's box. It will accommodate those who have received his majesty's personal invitation.

Quests of Queen Mary at the Abbey will be in the queen's box.

Queen Mary herself is not likely to attend the coronation. She has no part to perform in the ceremony, and, if she follows precedent, she will attend a religious service elsewhere.

When King George V was crowned on June 22, 1911, Queen Alexandra attended a private service at Sandringham church with her sister, the Empress Maria of Russia, and her daughter, Princess Victoria.

Afterwards, the three royal ladies were present at an open-air service for the Dertingham villagers and the celebration dinner for the tenants and children which followed.

MASK, SHELLS FOUND IN ABANDONED AUTO

A black mask, several pistol shells and several pistol plates were found in a sedan, abandoned at Eleventh and West Peachtree streets.

Four men, following a chase which began when the car struck another machine.

The abandoned car contained Tennessee and South Carolina license plates, and also a pair of Georgia plates, issued, police said, to S. E. Peacock, of Hartsfield, for a 1926 coupe. The abandoned machine, however, was a 1926 sedan.

Police said the Tennessee plates found in the car were those which residents reported seeing before Elliott B. Young, 22, 1-2 Central avenue, a deaf mute, was found, mysteriously injured, in front of 439 Creek street. Young was taken to Grady hospital, suffering from a broken right leg and head injuries.

Little Joe Guyon recently was elected the most popular freshman at Catholic University, Washington, D. C. (Last November I sat in a crowded lobby at the national baseball convention at Dayton, Ohio, and talked with Joe Guyon about his children. "I've brought them up as I wanted them to be brought up," he said. "And now, I'm looking around. The boy is a good athlete and a good boy. The girl is a good athlete and a good girl. They are students, too. I want them to have that education.")

This winter Joe Guyon is director of athletics at Winnebago, Nebraska, where the reservation for the Winnebago and Omaha tribes are located.

This administration, which has done more for the first Americans than all other administrations put together, giving them back their tribal crafts and their own ways of living, forgot to include a budget for athletic equipment. Joe Guyon would like to obtain any equipment he can get—used or otherwise.

No one is more worthier to be helped than Joe Guyon, who has made his way in the white man's world and who goes back to his own people to help them when he can.

Now and then there is some argument about the greatest football back ever to appear in the south. That is an entirely superfluous and unnecessary argument. It is possible, and legitimate, to argue long and loud as to the identity of the second best player.

The best football back ever to carry the ball south of the line was Joe Guyon. He could have played guard, tackle or end and been just as great. He did play a star guard on the great Carlisle team which had Pete Calac as fullback. Ask anyone about Calac!

He has a fine character, has Joe Guyon. He has been honest and decent all his life.

There is a story that has been told here before. It will, I think, bear telling again. Years ago, when Joe Guyon was at Georgia Tech, summer came on. And with it the news that some of Joe's relatives, along the Mexican border, had been killed by raiding Mexicans. He borrowed a sum of money from Coach Alexander and left, saying not a word.

Two months later he came back out of the silences. His clothes were worn and baggy and dirty. He himself was thin and drawn and dog tired. He handed Coach Alexander his money. And said not a word.

Coach Alexander ventured a question, casually:

"Where have you been, Joe?"

"Hunting Mexicans," he said, thin-lipped and grim.

And that was all.

I'll remember that story as long as time exists for me.

There must have been a great pride in Big Joe when the word came that Little Joe had been named the most popular boy in school. He won that election on his own, without any slush fund.

LIKE A SHIP AT SEA.

It is an impossible simile, perhaps. But it never fails to remind me of Joe Guyon. When on a ship at sea, another ship, seen on the horizon, shows only the rigging. It is then "hull down."

One looks again a bit later and the ship seems literally to leap into the eyes, riding high and seeming to tower for a mile on the horizon.

That's the way Joe Guyon looked to those who were on the other side of the line from him. And when he started, far from punt formation, he seemed to leap into one's face. He was tall and he wore pads and he looked like the incarnation of disaster and all the Four Horsemen of Doom rolled into one.

Man, he was a player. He ran with his knees flailing up so high I wonder now he didn't hit his own chin and knock out himself. Tackling him was a teeth-rattling, head-throbbing experience.

There have been many great football teams. Tech's teams of 1917, 1920 and 1928, Alabama's teams by Wade and Frank Thomas, and an occasional team here and there.

But the best backfield man was Joe Guyon. He not only could do everything with a football. He did it.

A COUPLE OF TESTS.

Just now Alabama and L. S. U. seem to have the best football teams in the south and in the nation.

Each has a pretty fair test coming up for Saturday.

Alabama plays Georgia Tech and that means trouble for Alabama. Twice Tech has broken up the Crimson attack when all the odds seemed to favor the Crimson. Frank Thomas will be taking no chances.

In fact, last week when his team had scored that surprisingly large victory over Tulane, he saw an Atlanta newspaperman approaching him and yelled:

"Don't say it. Don't you dare say it!"

"Say what?" asked the newspaperman.

"Don't you come in here and tell me we are a cinch to beat Tech," he said.

Alabama likely will have something of a letdown this week if the team was keyed to unusual heights for the Tulane game. The human tissue, mental and physical, doesn't seem to take kindly to two weeks of unusual mental and physical emotional strain. But it may be this Alabama team of Saturday just found itself; that it was off to a slow start and just got going.

At any rate, Frank Thomas has something. He wasn't figuring, in many of the preseason dopings, to have much chance at the title. But here is the season almost gone and the man has a team rated as one of the best anywhere. And if he and his boys can hurdle Tech and Vanderbilt they may hurdle all

AUBURN ELEVEN IS DETERMINED TO HALT OL' LOU

Stewart Through as Player; Boys Highly Keyed for L. S. U. Game.

AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Coach Jack Meagher said today that the Plainsmen—facing their decisive game this week end against L. S. U.—would never again hear the voice of Joe Stewart, varsity quarterback, bark out the signals for Auburn.

"Stewart won't play any more this year, and that means he won't play any more for Auburn, for he's a senior," Coach Meagher said. "Since the piece of cartilage was removed from his knee, it's been weak, and the chances are that it will be another year before it will be strong again."

But that bitter news was brightened somewhat by the report that the "rest of the kids," as Coach Meagher calls his players, will be in tip-top shape for the powerful Louisiana team that is unbeaten and untied within the Southeastern conference, and has only a tie game with Texas to mar an otherwise perfect season.

The husky, whispering voice of Auburn's coach grew a little stronger when asked for a prediction on Saturday's game.

"That's pretty hard to say," he replied, "but the boys will play a great ball game."

A lusty wail went up behind him, but Coach Meagher hurriedly explained that it was a healthy cry of his sixth child, and not a dig at his trick of dodging predictions.

"I'll start Scarborough, Fenton, Hitchcock and Kilgore in the backfield," he said, "and the regular line will be ready to go. We will go to Birmingham Friday morning for a light workout that afternoon."

New Mat Champ Has 7 Brothers; And All Wrestle

Editor's Note: Dean Detton, recently crowned world's heavyweight wrestling champion, who is discussed herein by Jack Cuddy, will defend his title against Dick Raines at the Atlanta theater Friday night.

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(UP)—"Meet the champion," said Ned Brown.

I pulled a boner and asked, "Champion of what?"

The slender semi-bald Brown, who handles publicity for Dempsey, red-handed up like one of those flowers in a sun-movie. And the husky, brown-haired guy at the table with him got red and flushed at once.

Brown, mad as a smoked-out hornet, cleared his throat and said, "This is Dean Detton, world heavyweight wrestling champion—if you must know, you know."

I didn't remember. I said I thought A. Babbie—no Dave Levin was world heavyweight champion in most places. But I admitted that, because of the election, etc. I had not been following the mad men of the mat for the last few days, and that in the interim even a Detton might have dethroned the mighty Brown.

Shred Ned knew he had me there then—he knew he had me intrigued by that remark. Because so often in the past we had marveled at the fact that in breeding horses you expected a fast-stepping son to follow in the hoof steps of his father. But that in athletics few fathers of prowess ever beget famous sons.

So I said to the husky guy with the curly brown hair, Sing Sing ears, and fist-like cauliflowered ears, "So your dad was a wrestler—eh?"

Detton puffed out his chest and said, "Yes he was—and a good one. He was a good weight man but he met and beat the best of them at all weights—catchweights they called it in those days—fellows like Jack Hartman, Pete Visser, Mike Yokeo, Mike Nichelson and Henry Jones. They were good wrestlers out there in the west on those days."

The fact that it is a Tech High—High school means more than anything else to the players. The entire season's success is all wrapped up in that one big night game. And no one will venture out on a limb and call a winner.

RIDING HIGH. Riverside riding high with two G. L. A. wins and no defeats along with a string of outside victories, in a point-a-minute season, rates the favorite to beat Savannah High Friday afternoon in Gainesville.

The Gainesville Cadets, coming from nowhere to a position atop the ladder, since Boys High had held to a 6-6 tie with them, have assembled one of the greatest teams ever seen in Georgia prep school circles.

Red Sanders, a former Vanderbilt star, started the season with only Komisar in the line and Van Thompson in the backfield, back from last year. And around those two all-G. I. A. A. stars, he has built a team of destruction to other prep elevens.

STARS SURPASSED. And Komisar and Van Thompson have not been the highlights in the 1936 season, being surpassed by the work of Cecil Hennis and Walton, who ran wild to beat Commercial 39 to 6 last Thursday night at Ponce de Leon park.

Boys' High beat Savannah only 6 to 0 here, but the Blue Jackets are given only an outside chance to hold the score close Friday afternoon.

Boys' High with its tie, holds second place, with Tech High and Monroe Aggies battling for third position at present. The Smithies will have their big chance of the year Saturday night at Ponce de Leon park, their only chance for a second place and a possible tie for the title will be in the game with Riverside on Thanksgiving Day at Gainesville.

GOTCH'S HOLD. I gasped in amazement. "A step-over hold!" Why—that's the same old-fashioned hold that Frank Gotch used. Why, that's the thing Gotch beat Hackenschmidt with in their London match. Is that your best hold? Haven't you got any modern and snappy like an Indian death grip, an Irish whip, or some lesser kiss?"

Detton ground his nice white teeth, laid him flat and made the best of it.

"Incidentally," I remarked, "when and where did you become champion, Mr. Detton?" It is by asking little questions like this that I manage to be a storehouse of sports information.

Detton ground his nice white teeth, laid him flat and made the best of it.

"I won the title from Dave Levin in Philadelphia on the night of September 28th," he said. "Yes, it was my first. I made him quit with a step-over hold."

"I did not like the way he chuckled and my left leg started to pain me in advance, so I said, 'that's a good idea. You can try it on Ned Brown, here, and I can see exactly how you do it.' But the wily Brown tut-tutted this proposition by saying that everybody knew exactly what the step-over was, and that a demonstration would be a

Georgia To Play Gamecocks in '37

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 10.—(AP)—W. H. Harth, athletic director at the University of South Carolina, said tonight the Gamecocks had signed with the University of Georgia for a game at Grant Park here October 2, 1937.

He said it would be the first time since 1920 that Georgia would be seen in action in Columbia.

By Felton Gordon.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Setting up a defense for the Tulane Green Wave caught the eyes of the Georgia football players this afternoon as the Red Devil team came up with a like-temple of Coach Red Dawson's team.

On several plays the Bulldog counter-attack looked with the result that Red scored at least three touch-downs. Toward the end of the skirmish the repulsing machinery was tightened up somewhat. Inferior charging and tackling marked the sham battle which lasted about 30 minutes.

Glen Johnson, right halfback who has been the star of the team, and Harry Stevens, the star of the squad, and Harry Stevens observed the workout in civilian clothes. The midship Savannah boy was recuperating after excessively baking his knee. He has played in every game despite the fact that he has been in and out of the hospital frequently. He has been a good player on the team.

Today's starting defense: Mililton Thomas and Barber, ends; Tinsley and Davis, tackles; Lumpkin, center; Rodenberry, quarterback; Causey and Vandiver, fullbacks; and Green, fullback. Coop Vandiver turned in an excellent piece of work as he threw the Red Devil backs for losses time after time. In addition to his proven ability the ex-Marist star seems to have an excellent football temperament. At the close of the season he will move for basketball. Last winter he was the high scorer of the freshman outfit.

Today's starting defense: Mililton Thomas and Barber, ends; Tinsley and Davis, tackles; Lumpkin, center; Rodenberry, quarterback; Causey and Vandiver, fullbacks; and Green, fullback. Coop Vandiver turned in an excellent piece of work as he threw the Red Devil backs for losses time after time. Alabama Now Ranked 4th Team in Nation

NORTHWESTERN REMAINS FIRST IN WEEK'S POLL

Marquette Skids to 8th;
Fordham Is Third and L. S. U. Is Seventh.

NEW YORK. Nov. 10.—(AP)—Northwestern maintained a slight margin over Minnesota today in the Associated Press national college football ranking poll. Fordham remained more securely in third place, and Alabama leaped from fourteenth to fourth in the biggest gain of the week.

Despite Minnesota's amazing 52-0 victory over Iowa and Northwestern's struggle against a desperate Wisconsin team, the Widders were given a 16-vote advantage over Gophers. Football writers gave Northwestern 435 out of a possible 470 votes. Minnesota 419. Fordham's total rose to 348 on the strength of its convincing 10-0 victory over Purdue.

Marquette skidded from fourth place to eighth after squeaking out a 4-6 win over Creighton. Pitt, Nebraska and Louisiana State followed Alabama in fifth, sixth and seventh places, and Santa Clara and Washington were voted ninth and tenth.

The ballots were geographically divided as follows: East, 21; middle, 20; West, 10; South, 10; New England, 1; and far west, 3.

With the votes being distributed on a 10-8 basis for first, second and third places, Northwestern received 31 votes for first place to Minnesota's 12, Fordham's three and Alabama's one. Twenty-four men put Northwestern second, while Fordham and Northwestern each received eight nominations for the runner-up position.

Alane, thrashed by Alabama, slid from tenth place out of the picture this week. They didn't get a single vote. Southern California, given 76 votes for eleventh place the week before, got only nine votes today.

The rankings:

Williamson's Ratings

These ratings represent each team's efficiency of consistent performance to date. The ratings do not always indicate a direct gauge of the possible strength of each team, but are based on the number of wins, but in general, do indicate team's relative strength in comparison with other schools in the conference. The ratings of the completed season, however, should be close to a 100 per cent measure of the strength of the respective teams. The percentage figures below (right-hand column) are the percentage of winning games, fractionally reduced, so that it is exact that at the end of the season the teams will find in their true 1-2-3 order. The ratings are not figured directly on wins, losses, and ties. A team gets more credit rating for a 1-0-2 touchdown loss to a top-notch team than for a walk-over over a lower-flight opponent.

Ontario Will Seek To Take Over Funds for Good of Children.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press)—Premier Hepburn said today the Ontario government will "probably" try to take over the funds of the $500,000 Charles Vance Millar estate and administer them for the benefit of baby derby-winning families.

"We want to see the kids get a square deal," he added.

Hepburn said he agreed with Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck and Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon that it was the government's duty, "in the best interests of the children," to administer the estate.

"How it will be done we don't know and we will not decide until Mr. Roebuck returns from England," he said.

Executors of the estate have asked Justice W. E. Middlemiss of the Ontario Superior court, to decide on validity of the will's clause which provides the residue of the estate is to go to the Toronto mother registering the greatest number of births in the 10 years following Millar's death.

This period ended October 1.

If the judge decides the clause is valid, he will hear the evidence on which claims of nearly a dozen mothers are based and decide the winner or joint winners.

Occupy Important Part.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The biggest auto show of them all opens here tomorrow for the annual week's display of the newest and finest of the industry's products.

All over town rolled the automobiles tonight—into Grand Central station, where the thirty-second annual exhibition automobile show has its headquarters; into hotel display rooms in Times Square and on Park Avenue, where independent shows are held; into a huge salon on Lexington Avenue; into the showrooms of upper Broadway's automobile row.

With them rolled trailers, newer than last year, and almost so popular as the 200 compete cars an, chassis.

It will draw a special class of visitors, particularly interested in the trailer, the novel mode of migratory living, growing so rapidly in popularity that a billion-dollar industry has been predicted for it.

There are countless novelties; tomorrow an engineer will describe a television "eye" used to "look over" the noise in an automobile, credited with bringing about the quietest riding conditions yet attained. Engineers photographed sounds, then examined the basis of the interior of the car until they found the structural places capable of producing similar sounds.

There are oddities such as cars that open in half, and sections that dip down quickly, and close again.

Nancy Waldo Jones Wears Orchids Presented by Her Three Brothers

By Sally Forth.

IT WAS orchids to Nancy Waldo Jones yesterday upon the auspicious occasion of her formal presentation to Atlanta socialites at her Peachtree circle home. The lovely debutante wore three exquisite orchids, gifts of her brothers, Bob, Waldo and Slaton Jones, who chose to say it with flowers as a gesture of love for their only sister upon this all-important date in her young life. Nancy departed from the traditional debutante custom of carrying a bouquet, and wore the exquisite orchids given her by her brothers. She made an unforgettable picture in her becoming white net costume, posed over white satin and embroidered in gold, which brought out her blond loveliness. Her mother, Mrs. Robert H. Jones, wore aquamarine blue crepe.

After bidding good-bye to the last lingering guest—and they were wont to linger at the enjoyable affair—Nancy barely had time to powder her nose before her contemporaries in the Debutante Club arrived, with their escorts, for a buffet supper. Mrs. Alice Denton Jennings, one of society's favorite people, was present to interpret present and future affairs of interest to the debutante set. Even Mr. and Mrs. Jones and the group who assisted in entertaining, including Mr. and Mrs. John Slaton Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hitt, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson Jr. and Mrs. Charles Andrews, were spied listening in.

SHORTLY after the recent death of Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy, Julia Collier Harris devoted her column, "From My Balcony," which appears on the editorial page of the Chattanooga Times each Sunday, to the life and achievements of this remarkable woman. Mrs. Harris told something of the irreparable loss suffered by the blind and devoted Helen Keller in the passing of her eminent teacher. For it was Mrs. Macy who opened the doors of the world, so to speak, to the blind and deaf Miss Keller.

Now comes news that Mrs. Harris' story has been put in Braille for Miss Keller to read. In a letter to the editor of the Times, Nella Braddy Henney, biographer of Mrs. Macy, says: "You will be interested to know that Julia Collier Harris' article relating to the death of Anne Sullivan Macy has already been put in Braille so that Miss Keller can have it under her own finger tips. It was spelled to her as soon as it came."

ALL the debutantes started a singing "Here Comes the Bride" Monday morning when a certain blond member of the deb club came into the room. Dame Rumor was circulating the news that the petite bud was to be married that day, and in answer to the debutantes' questions she said, her pretty face flushed to a deep crimson, "Well, I was, but everybody found out about it, and I changed my mind." In other words, she didn't say yes and she didn't say no, and the Debutante Club ranks remain the same.

SNAPSHOTS taken at recent debut parties: Emily Evans trying to do the latest dance steps with one high-heeled slipper and one heelless bedroom slipper, and looking charming in spite of her injured foot. Elkin Goddard looking too cunning for words in a danger red dress with a wide floating skirt of tulle. Genie Snow making a darling figure in salmon pink taffeta, with a bunch of matching velvet flowers perched demurely on top of her head. Martha Burnett with a tricky coiffure swirled from the crown of her head to the nape of her neck—so attractive. Mrs. George McCarty in a simple black dress with a stunning black galay cape and a cluster of orchids on her shoulder. Mrs. Ewell Gay in gold lame with her shoulders swathed in glorious sables.

Joe Brown P.T.A. Joe E. Brown P.T.A. will sponsor a bridge party November 13 at 3:30 o'clock. Victor S. Smith will advise players. Attractive prizes will be offered. The public is invited.

Miss Barge and Mr. Schell Are Wed At Afternoon Rites at St. Mark

Miss Frances Barge became the bride of Robert Milam Schell at a beautiful afternoon ceremony at St. Mark Methodist church, with the pastor, the Rev. J. M. Johnson, reading the marriage service.

A program of nuptial music was given by Mrs. John Nelson, organist, and Mr. L. D. King, soloist.

The interior of the church was beautifully decorated with quantities of palms, ferns and southern smilax, the backdrop of foliage being interspersed with tall floor baskets filled with giant white chrysanthemums.

White cathedral tapers burned in seven-branched candelabra placed amid the palms and ferns. The cluster of white chrysanthemums marked the aisle for the families of the bride and groom.

Clad in lustrous ivory-toned satin, the lovely young bride entered the church with her brother, Richmond Irvin Barge, who gave her in marriage. Her gown was cut on princess lines and closely moulded to her slender figure. The satin train was being built up by the flaring skirt. A yoke of lace lace outlined the neck of the bodice, which was buttoned down the back with tiny satin-covered buttons. The bridal veil fell in two tiers from a becoming cap of duchess lace, which was worn by the bride's maternal grandmother on her wedding day. A fan-shaped bouquet of valley lilies, centered with bride's roses and tied with satin streamers, completed the bridal ensemble.

Miss Elizabeth Barge was her sister maid of honor. The bridesmaids included Miss Mary Hatcher of Dawson; Miss Betty Parker of Washington; D. C.; Mrs. Russell Bryan and Mrs. M. L. Clegg.

The attendants were gowned alike in chartreuse green taffeta, the wide, gored skirts being finished at the hemline with several rows of cording and extending to form brief trains. The gowns featured close-fitting jackets which buttoned smartly up the front and were finished with flaring peploons. The attendants' hats, with the costumes were small hats of matching tulle banded with taffeta and trimmed with short veils. The attendants carried bouquets of yellow erysanthemums tied with yellow satin streamers.

Lovely Debutante Will Make Bow Tomorrow

Grace Scarboro

Pictured above is Miss Anne Irby, lovely member of the 1936-37 Debutante Club and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Irby. Miss Irby makes her formal bow to society tomorrow at an elaborate luncheon at which her mother entertains at Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club. The auspicious occasion will also celebrate the birthday anniversary of the charming debutante. Miss Irby is tall, slender and graceful and is of the beautiful blond type. She possesses a charm of manner and a sparkling personality which have made her a social favorite in any gathering she chooses to lend her presence. She attended Washington Seminary where she was a member of the Phi Pi and Pirates Club. She enjoys all outdoor sports with golf, tennis and swimming leading as favorites. She is a sister of Miss Mary Russell Irby and A. F. Irby Jr. She is being honored at a series of social affairs during her debut year which further attests her popularity. The sketch of Miss Irby was made by Grace Scarboro from a photograph by Asano, Japanese photographer.

CHICAGO, Monday.—Just before election I had a letter from the wife of an old man in the Bronx, New York city, who though 90 years old and very ill, was trying so hard to keep alive to cast his vote on November 3 for the President. She told me that his wish had not been granted, as he had passed away before that date.

In the same mail came a letter from a gentleman telling me that he had been touched by the story in my column but he wished me to know there was another 90-year-old gentleman in the Bronx, in very good health, a Democrat of good Democratic antecedents, who had assembled 67 of his friends and had them properly registered in order that they might cast their votes for the Republican candidate. Just why he should have taken so much trouble to send me this word I do not know, unless he wished me to realize that the President's one faithful adherent was far outbalanced by the number of Democrats who did not share his views.

The only point of interest as far as I am concerned is that the story again proves how good it is to live in a country where you are free to make up your own mind and do as you choose in the privacy of a voting booth. In the end, the will of the majority is carried out peacefully.

Mrs. Scheider and I left Washington Sunday at 3 p. m. and were met in North Philadelphia by Mrs. Donner Roosevelt and our small grandson, Bill. We went home with them for an early supper and Bill took pride in showing me his toys and his own drawings of animals, which are pinned on the wall over his bed. We had to leave at 7:20 p. m. for Temple University and I think Bill was rather lonely at seeing us depart, for he suggested to Mrs. Scheider, who had been playing with him, that she might remain and let Mummie and Granie go.

Something peculiar happened to the microphone at Temple University and it went on and off in a manner which must have made the audience more interested in what was going to happen to my voice next than in what that voice was saying. However, they were a most attentive and kindly audience.

When it was over and the press came up to see me, I was much amused to find a young man doing duty for a lady reporter. He asked me rather nervously about my dress and about the gold ornament which I wore, prefacing each remark by saying that this was not in my line. I think it is rather a good thing to have gentlemen occasionally carry a woman's assignment. They may discover that it is not so easy to write an interesting way about these subjects which are so frequently assigned to women.

We must have been weary Sunday night when we got on the train at 4 o'clock, for we did not get up on Monday morning until an unconsciously late hour. Since then, we have been reading and looking at the landscape, which, to my great surprise, shows patches of snow here and there.

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

Nobodys "diets" any more...eating to grow slim is the latest thing in reducing. We are fast becoming experts at calorie juggling to get the most food for the least calories and without missing a single vitamin.

A safe reducing diet is based on a normal menu at two-thirds your calorie requirements. You can't go wrong by that method, and you can get beautiful results.

The League of Nations Committee on Nutrition, which met in Geneva this year, summed up the essentials of a balanced diet: "Milk is the nearest approach to a perfect food that man knows. A land flowing with milk is the aim of the modern nutrition expert. Fresh green vegetables and fruits, especially citrus fruits, meat, eggs, and cheese form the important protective vitamins. The potato, long banished from the diet by slimming experts, is re-established as being a valuable source of calcium, and the only vegetable whose Vitamin C content remains unimpaired after cooking."

The essentials of the balanced diet form the basis of the reducing menu. Reducing has done a complete about-face, and before we take a single food out of the menu we ask, "Does this rob the menu of anything but calories?" Not only must the protective foods be included, but they must be included in adequate amounts. Women require four times as much iron as men, and even the high calorie diet may easily be deficient in this mineral.

Since this mineral must be picked up bit by bit, it is important for the reducer to know the iron-rich foods: Beef,ysters, liver, eggs, whole grains, molasses and spinach. Scientists tell us that Vitamin C is connected with the utilization of iron in the diet—the important reason for including a citrus fruit daily. Some of this vitamin are oranges, grapefruit, lemons, tomatoes, pineapple, cabbage, potatoes.

This emphasis on food may not be your idea of dieting, for most overweighted people think of reducing as a diet of "leaves." Protective Diet Chart, to Ida Jean Kain in care of Mrs. C. M. Toler, secretary and treasurer of the Debutante Club.
